CIAT AND AIA ANNOUNCE JOINT PRINCIPLES FOR MODERNIZATION OF TERRORISM RISK INSURANCE EXTENSION ACT

Principles Designed to Provide Long-Term Economic Security; Increased Private Market Capacity

WASHINGTON, DC-The Coalition to Insure Against Terrorism (CIAT) and the American Insurance Association (AIA) today announced agreement on a set of common principles that the two organizations believe must be considered by Congress as it prepares to take up legislation that would renew the federal backstop for terrorism risk insurance. The House Financial Services Subcommittee on Capital Markets, Insurance and Government-Sponsored Enterprises chaired by Rep. Paul E. Kanjorski (D-PA) will hold a hearing on this issue tomorrow (April 24).

“We believe that consensus between two major stakeholders in the debate over how to structure renewal of TRIEA represents an important step forward which will hopefully inform the discussion among policymakers,” said Martin DePoy, coordinator of CIAT’s steering committee. “We are pleased to report this development.”

“Importantly, the CIAT/AIA joint principles call for the new legislation to be permanent, for the distinction between foreign and domestic acts of terrorism to be eliminated and to recognize the extreme nature of NBCR attacks through a lower deductible and certainty with respect to the role of private insurers in managing NBCR terrorism risk,” added Marc Racicot, AIA’s President. “These principles represent a set of parameters that we believe should be considered as part of any TRIEA extension bill.”

A critical issue that must be resolved by the new legislation, according to CIAT and AIA, is the separate treatment for nuclear, biological, chemical and radiological (NBCR) attacks which would recognize the unique characteristics of these events. Reports issued last year by the U.S. Government Accountability Office and the President's Working Group on Financial Markets confirmed that the private market has not provided coverage for NBCR attacks outside of workers' compensation lines. Insurers are required by state law to provide the coverage for workers' compensation.

To address this issue, AIA and CIAT have agreed that the new legislation should contain a mandatory "make-available" provision that would require insurers to follow the standard workers' compensation model. The organizations' joint principles stress that the make-available provision must be accompanied by a clear acknowledgement that the federal government is responsible for NBCR terrorism losses above primary insurers' individual NBCR retention levels. Additionally, TRIEA's insurer co-pay requirement for NBCR would be eliminated.

"We are gratified by the broad-based, bi-partisan support Congress has shown for continuing the terrorism reinsurance backstop, but policyholders and insurers alike believe that new legislation should address some important issues that were not fully resolved by the Terrorism Risk Insurance Act and its extension," said DePoy. "We believe the new program should end only when Congress determines terrorism no longer is a significant threat."

"Congress sees the compelling need for a comprehensive solution to this issue," Racicot concluded. "And we are enthusiastic about working with lawmakers and the policyholder community to achieve that solution."
