

Strength in the face of adversity.

In the aftermath of 9/11, Congress passed the Terrorism Risk Insurance Act (TRIA), sending a clear message to foreign terrorists: you cannot rattle the American economy, and attacks will be met by a commitment to recovery and rebuilding.

Today, TRIA is working, and our economy is growing. Our economy needs the confidence TRIA brings to continue to grow, but the protections of TRIA are set to expire while terrorism alerts remain high and threats still loom.

The seventy-one members of the Coalition to Insure Against Terrorism represent businesses large and small, from real estate to transportation, from sports to entertainment. Together with the nation's insurers, we believe it's time for America to show resolve and send foreign terrorists another message – extend TRIA today.
